

The heroin connection

Sedalia emerges as drug hot spot

(Editor's Note: This is the first installment of a four-part series on the extent and characteristics of the heroin problem in Sedalia. The series was written by staff writers Max Eriksen and Ed Vaughan, following a two-month investigation.)

By ED VAUGHAN
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

What started out as an investigation into the current status of Sedalia's drug problem has, of necessity, focused in on one alarming aspect of that problem.

Heroin.

An extensive, two-month investigation by The Democrat-Capital has revealed that Sedalia has a serious heroin problem, more so than most people realize or are willing to admit.

"More heroin is bought and sold in Sedalia than any other place in the state, outside Kansas City and St. Louis," according to one federal narcotics agent The Democrat-Capital interviewed.

Users and small-time sellers of heroin have been known to come from as far away as Columbia, Springfield and Kansas City to purchase the drug here, according to the narcotics agent and local users interviewed. The main supply of heroin comes through one local dealer.

The social costs of the heroin problem, and to a lesser extent other drugs, can be measured in many ways — crime, family disruptions, and even death.

George Thomas, social services director at Bothwell Hospital, told The Democrat-Capital that of 84 suicides or suicide attempts investigated by his office in the past two years, between 20 and 25 were drug-related. About one third of these attempts were successful, he said.

Federal narcotics agent: 'More heroin is bought and sold in Sedalia than any other place in the state, outside Kansas City and St. Louis.'

State Rep. Jim Mathewson, commenting on local drug traffic, recently said, "It's funny, you don't hear much about the drug problem when you're here, but when I go to Jefferson City, St. Louis or Kansas City for hearings, I always hear about how bad a problem we have here. I bet this has happened to me 15 or 20 times. That's mostly hearsay, I know, but when you hear it time and time again, you begin to wonder."

Richard Vermillion, chairman of the State Board of Probation and Parole, echoed Mathewson's feeling. Vermillion told The Democrat-Capital that he began to get the feeling about a year and a half ago that Sedalia had a serious drug problem.

In the course of interviewing prisoners, primarily at the Algoa Reformatory, which houses offenders between the ages of 17 and 25, Vermillion said Sedalia's name kept popping up. "It seems like a heavy number of people with drug problems were coming from that area," he said.

"When you conduct parole hearings four days a week, things like that become a pattern after a while," Vermillion added. He pointed out, however, that he had less information on the current status of the heroin problem in Sedalia. But he added that heroin offenders are much more difficult to apprehend than those who deal mainly in pills, and that he therefore would have less opportunity to interview such persons.

He and other law enforcement officials agreed that the Ozark Music Festival, which was held here in July of 1974, was a major factor in introducing more youths to drugs. The Pettis County grand jury indicted 19 persons on drug charges stemming from that event.

Thomas said two festival-goers he knew of, a boy and a girl, were taken to the Fulton State Hospital as mental "vegetables" as a result of drugs they took at the festival. Neither is expected to recover, he added.

It is heroin, because of its strong addictive quality and high cost, that most often forces users into crime to support their habits.

Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming estimated that 35 per cent of the cases he handles are drug-related. Some estimates are that as much as half of the local crimes falls into this category. The recent upsurge in purse-snatchings, for example, is directly related to heroin users, local sources in the drug business have told The Democrat-Capital.

Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax noted that "drug users will resort to all (types of) crimes" to support their habit. "Most home burglaries are drug-related," he said.

Police Chief William E. Miller estimated that 40 to 50 per cent of all crimes investigated by his department are drug-related and are committed to support drug habits or while the user is under the influence of a drug.

"Drugs, shoplifting and prostitution go hand-in-hand," Miller said. It is a common belief among officials that most prostitutes turn to that "profession" to support their habit, he said.

Most persons who begin using drugs "are bored with life," according to Thomas, who is called in to investigate all drug cases treated at Bothwell Hospital.

Thomas, after a preliminary investigation, generally refers most such patients to someone who can give them help through individual attention. On call 24 hours a day, seven days week, Thomas gets referrals through the hospital's emergency ward or from private physicians.

After two years on the job, Thomas has dealt with about 75 cases of both heroin use and addiction. Most of his cases are referred to the Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center in Columbia, with about 20 of the heroin cases referred to the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan., for methadone treatment. Some users also are sent to the West Missouri Mental Health Center, also in Kansas City.

The latest KU Medical Center statistics show there are at least 50 to 75 regular heroin users in Pettis County, Thomas said. Some local users have told Thomas there are closer to 200. Based on The Democrat-Capital's investigation, an estimate of between 150 and 200 heroin users in the Sedalia area does not appear exaggerated.

All four committed suicide. One of the four was a boy with a $165-a-day habit and another, a girl, spent $135 each day to support her habit.

Thomas said four of his patients, aged 18 to 26, quit the KU methadone program and tried to break their habits alone and go "cold turkey," meaning to quit taking heroin instantly, without the aid of other medication.

All four committed suicide. One of the four was a boy with a $165-a-day habit and another, a girl, spent $135 each day to support her habit.

One girl and one boy shot themselves, while another boy suffocated himself and the fourth, a girl, took an intentional overdose. Two were Sedalians and the other two were from the Central Missouri area.

Thomas said he was aware of three persons attempting to commit suicide more than once over drug-related problems, but none have been successful.

The youngest person treated in Sedalia for heroin use, other than festival-related cases, involved a 15-year-old Sedalia boy, Thomas said. In the course of this investigation, The Democrat-Capital was told that heroin addiction goes even younger than this, but so far this has not been confirmed.

The drug problem in this area decreased or went underground for a while after

SFCC vote fifth in six years

For the fifth time in the last six years, voters in the State Fair Community College district will be asked Tuesday to approve a tax proposal for the college's expansion. The ballot will cover construction of a $1.4 million vocational-technical education building.

This time around, however, citizens will be voting on a 60-cent, one-year levy increase rather than a long-range bond issue levy.

The measure requires only a simple majority vote for approval, rather than the two-thirds margin needed on bond issues.

Commenting on the election Monday, SFCC Board of Trustees President William Hopkins noted that one of the most important contributions a new vocational-technical facility could make to the district would be to introduce more industry into the community and create more local jobs.

Hopkins noted that about 10 years ago the Zenith Corp. decided to locate a major color TV production plant in Springfield because the city was capable of training employees in its own vocational-technical facility.

"At least 1,000 workers for the company were trained in this manner," Hopkins said. "They repeatedly told Springfield that one of the most attractive lures the city had was its vocational-technical facility. This took the burden of the company having to train people in its own facility and thus creating congestion and confusion."

If such a facility were approved Tuesday, Hopkins said, it could be used in a similar manner by industries located in the college district during after-school hours.

Regarding the one-year, 60-cent financing approach, Hopkins noted that several high schools across the state have financed physical expansion in this manner after failing to secure a two-thirds favorable vote in regular bond levy

Ford reaffirms U.S.-Sino goals

PEKING (AP) — Implicitly acknowledging their differences over detente with the Soviet Union, President Ford and Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping today pledged to continue working for better Chinese-American relations.

Ford got a restrained but correct welcome on his arrival for a five-day visit he said is aimed at fostering mutual understanding between the Chinese and American peoples. The atmosphere improved perceptibly after the airport ceremonies.

Speaking at a banquet in the Great Hall of the People six hours after landing in the Chinese capital, Ford said: "The moves that were taken in 1971 and 1972 by the leaders of China and the United States were of historic significance. I take this occasion to reaffirm my commitment to the objectives and the principles which emerged from those first steps and specifically to the normalization of our relations."

Teng described the Soviet Union, without naming it, as "the country which most zealously preaches peace and is the most dangerous source of war," and added that "rhetoric about detente cannot cover up the stark reality of the growing danger of war." Ford chose to emphasize the things which bring China and the United States together.

He said that China and the United States have a mutual interest in seeing that the world is not dominated by force or pressure. He said that the current situation requires "strength, vigilance and firmness," but he rejected the idea that China might dictate how the United States should approach the problem of detente.

"In pursuing our objectives," Ford said, "each of us will of course determine our policies and methods according to our differing positions in the world and our perceptions of our respective national interests."

The President, Mrs. Ford, their daughter Susan and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger received a warm but formally stiff welcome on arrival at Peking airport.

Teng headed the welcomers, and there was the usual playing of national anthems, military guard of honor and handshakes with diplomats and officials.

Since the United States and China do not have full diplomatic relations there were no lengthy exchange of speeches and no cheering crowds at the airport along Ford's 18-mile route into the city.

Followed by his wife and daughter,

Ford strode down the ramp of Air Force One and shook hands warmly with Teng, who greeted the President on behalf of the Chinese government and Premier Chou En-lai.

Chou, 77, is seriously ill and has not seen any foreign visitors for some time. Chairman Mao Tse-tung, now 81, is expected to receive the President.

The weather was crisp and cold as the presidential plane landed at 2:50 p.m. The President was hatless and wore a dark overcoat while Mrs. Ford and Susan both wore fur coats.

The airport ceremonies were identical to those for the arrival in February 1972 of President Richard M. Nixon, who with Chou opened a new era of Chinese-American relations.

Councilmen may act on rezoning request

The City Council is scheduled to act tonight on a controversial rezoning request and hear a report by City Counselor Robert Fritz regarding the Park Board's recent refusal to allow American Legion Post 16 to move its professional wrestling matches back to Convention Hall from the Sedalia Community Center.

The rezoning request centers around neighborhood opposition to the proposed expansion of Fair View Nursing Home, at the northwest corner of 16th and Warren. Several persons living near the nursing home maintain the addition, if built, would add more traffic and create more congestion in the largely-residential area. The possibility of lowered property values was also mentioned when the request was initially heard last month by the Planning and Zoning Commission. The commission approved the rezoning request, 6-2, which is subject to final council approval.

The council postponed a final decision on the matter Nov. 17. Fritz Monday said he has drawn up an ordinance covering the rezoning request for consideration by the council tonight.

Jim Buckley, attorney for the nursing home, stated Monday, however, that he may possibly request a continuance in the matter to allow more time to gather relevant information and further prepare his case.

Regarding the American Legion wrestling dispute, the council Nov. 17 requested Fritz to investigate the matter and report back.

Nebraska high court ruling

Press coverage restricted

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—The Nebraska Supreme Court Monday refused to lift portions of a "gag rule" imposed on newsmen covering the slayings of six members of a Sutherland, Neb., family.

Erwin Charles Simants faces trial in Lincoln County District Court on six counts of first-degree murder in connection with the Oct. 18 slayings of the Henry Kellie family.

The Nebraska court removed all restrictions on coverage of the case except for a prohibition on the reporting of any confessions that might have been made, or "other information strongly implicative of the accused as the perpetrator of the slayings."

The case has attracted national attention because a coalition of Nebraska news gathering organizations has also asked the U.S. Supreme Court to remove the "gag." That request is still pending.

The "gag" was first imposed by Lincoln County Court Judge Ronald Ruff. Lincoln County District Court Judge Hugh Stuart removed Ruff's "gag," and issued a less restrictive order.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun lifted portions of the gag Nov. 21, and the news organizations challenging the gag have asked the full U.S. Supreme Court to review the case and to lift the gag.

The Nebraska Supreme Court order did not specifically prohibit reporting on those circumstances. After citing stories published in the North Platte Telegraph, the Lincoln Star and the Denver Post before Simants preliminary hearing, the Nebraska high court said, "The concern of the prosecutor, the defense attorney and the county judge that pre-trial publicity might make it difficult or impossible for the State of Nebraska to afford Simants a fair trial before an impartial jury was not ill founded."

The Nebraska court said the U.S. Supreme Court has often said an order restricting publication bears "a heavy presumption against its constitutional validity."

Judge Riley to hear cases

The Missouri Supreme Court has appointed Judge James T. Riley of the 19th Judicial District, Cole County, to hear two felony cases against Richard A. Cooper, 17, 1806 South Prospect, involving five counts of burglary and stealing.

Cooper filed applications for the disqualification of Circuit Judge Frank Meyer from hearing those cases on Sept. 11. He maintained that Judge Meyer's alleged prejudice and interest in the cases would not permit him a fair trial. Cooper also withdrew his applications for change of venue from Pettis County in both cases.

Cooper is charged with several burglaries in Sedalia on April 9. He remains in jail in lieu of $15,000 bond.

When arrested on those charges, Cooper was free on $3,500 bond on charges of second degree-burglary and stealing in connection with a Jan. 29 burglary at the Clark Service Station, 216 West Broadway.

Arrest of 4 persons clears recent thefts

Several recent area thefts have been solved by police with the arrest of two Sedalia men and two juveniles.

Police reported that Virgil Harris, 20, 914 South Vermont, and a juvenile were arrested about 11:25 p.m. Saturday while allegedly removing two wheels and tires from a car parked at Town and Country Motors, 3110 West Broadway.

Harris was arraigned in Magistrate Court Monday morning on charges of tampering with a motor vehicle. He remained in the county jail at noon Monday in lieu of $2,500 bond. His preliminary hearing has been set for Dec. 17.

The juvenile arrested with Harris was turned over to juvenile authorities.

On information furnished by Harris and the juvenile, another juvenile and Willis Chester Harris, 17, whose mailing address was listed as Box 1093, were arrested at 8 a.m. Sunday in the 500 block of West Second.

Harris was charged with petit larceny in connection with the theft of several used auto batteries about five weeks ago. He was released from jail on $50 bond for court Tuesday. The juvenile was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Acting upon other information furnished by Virgil Harris, police recovered two motorcycles which were stolen sometime early Saturday morning. The motorcycles, owned by Uvonne Balke, 623 East 19th, were taken from Balke's garage.

One of the motorcycles was found north of Beaman and the other at Covered Bridge Park, south of Sedalia.

Police reported that the arrest of Virgil Harris also cleared the burglary of a Beaman grocery store, owned by Larry and Joyce Smith, Beaman. About $15 in change, some candy bars, five cartons of cigarettes, 11 loaves of bread and two cases of beer were reported taken in the burglary, sometime Thursday.

Also solved with the arrests was the theft of several shotgun shells and a rifle from a truck owned by Glenn McMullin, Route 5. The truck was parked on a road near Beaman sometime Saturday when the theft occurred. Information furnished by Harris helped with the recovery of the stolen rifle in a ditch near Beaman.

Police reported that Virgil Harris furnished them with information that led to the recovery of some leather goods stolen from a car parked at the Ramada Inn last week, and several cases of soda from a truck at the G-Disco store. Neither of the thefts had been reported to police.

Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming said Monday that the investigations in the thefts was continuing and it is not known if any additional charges would be filed.

Earthquake

hits Hawaii's

'big island'

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — The people on Hawaii's "Big Island" have learned to live with the threat of earthquakes, tidal waves and volcanic eruption.

The island of Hawaii, 200 miles southeast of Honolulu, was battered Saturday by two strong quakes — one of them the strongest in more than a century — which triggered tidal waves along the beaches and small eruptions at Kilauea Volcano. One man was killed, one was missing, and property damage was estimated as high as $2 million.

Just seven hours after tidal wave warnings were lifted, the annual Christmas parade began as scheduled in Hilo, a waterfront town that has been battered by earthquakes and tidal waves time after time.

"People here know how to live with it," said Kiyoji Shigeoka as he opened his vacuum cleaner store for business Sunday in Hilo, where a third of the island's 75,000 residents live. "You can't fight nature."

"I worry about it every day," said a woman at work in her gift shop. "But I wouldn't want to live any place else except Hilo."

While authorities totaled the damage, rangers at the Volcanoes National Park pressed their search for a camper reported missing after a section of beach collapsed below sea level. The missing man is Michael Cruz, 26, of Mountain View, Hawaii.

Dr. James A. Mitchel of Hilo was killed when water swept over the same beach.

Saturday's two earthquakes were measured at 5.5 and 7.2 on the Richter Scale — the second reading indicating a quake capable of causing major devastation. The quakes triggered tidal waves and small eruptions at Kilauea Volcano, but did no effect the other Hawaiian islands.

Both tremors were centered on the flank of Kilauea Volcano on the southeast side of the 4,000-square-mile island, the biggest in the chain.

Downtown Hilo was closed off for a time Saturday to prevent looting of stores whose windows had broken during the earthquakes.

The heaviest property damage came at Punaluu, in an isolated section of the island, where an 18-foot tidal wave knocked half a dozen homes from their foundations and heavily damaged a restaurant.

Saturday's was the most powerful quake in Hawaii since the 1868 tremor that killed 79 persons and was estimated at 7.7 on the Richter scale.

Off the California coast, the two principal harbors of Catalina Island nearly drained as a result of a freak tidal movement apparently resulting from the Hawaii earthquake, harbor officials said. Catalina is about 26 miles west of Los Angeles.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs.

the 19 were arrested in raids conducted here last December, according to information from one source.

Drug cases Thomas investigated increased in April and May and then declined in June and July. Heroin-related cases soared to 15 during the last week in August and the first two weeks of September, he said. The latter were all referral or walk-in patients. Since mid-September, his office has handled five heroin referral cases, Thomas said Monday.

Although many of his patients have turned to the methadone treatment plan, which costs $2 per day, Thomas said it has a major drawback — it too is habit-forming. Only half of those who try methadone stick with the program, Thomas said.

An even more depressing figure is that only one out of 1,000 persons using methadone is completely cured, both of heroin and methadone use. "They have to want to stop using drugs," Thomas said.

Son's paper best forgotten

Dear Ann Landers: I have been going around with a lump in my throat for two weeks. It's because of something I found in my son's room. No, it wasn't drugs, pornography or anything like that. It was a paper he had written for school. (He's a graduate student in psychology.) I was dusting his desk and accidentally read enough so that I wanted to read more. It made me sick. I went back later to copy the part that stunned me so I could send it to you.

This is what he wrote: "It stems largely from a feeling of distaste for the unique brand of arrogance and ignorance to which I was subjected throughout my childhood by various members of my nuclear and extended family, and which is, perhaps, exemplified lucidly by those dogmatic members of the Christian faith who begin every other sentence with, 'I know!'"

Baking soda for greasy stove top

DEAR POLLY — When I buy a new bedspread, draperies, blanket or something for the bedroom I put the instructions and papers that came with it under the mattress. When it is time to wash the item the information is right at hand and there is no chance of being lost. I also find this a good place to keep other papers from things like slipcovers, scatter rugs and even wearing apparel. If the instructions do not have a picture of the item I write the name on it like "Curtains for boy's bedroom", etc. — JUDITH.

DEAR JUDITH — Your Pointer reminds me of days long past when people stashed money, business papers and so on under the mattress for safe keeping. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with people who let their emotional attitudes control their actions. I drive a small compact car and am constantly amused, frightened and angered by those who feel they must pass me no matter what the circumstances and often flash in front of me without signaling, when there is really not room to pass. Sometimes this obliges me to stop while they negotiate a change of lanes, as well as to slam on my brakes regardless of who is behind. I always drive to the speed limit allowed, so they may go over it to pass. This rudeness extends to crowding techniques of all sorts and it is often just a spiteful action.

Drivers of large cars reveal their silly prejudices concerning their cars, just as others have them concerning sex, race, color and classes. Such actions seem to clearly identify these people as unthinking and actually evil promoters of divisiveness in society. Surely if all such people would give themselves a good personal investigation, they would try to change their personalities to the kind of brotherhood needed to bring our society out of some serious, downward, destructive trends. — MILDRED.

Ex-principal gets support of students

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP)

— Student leaders at St. Mary's High School here have declared Monday a day of meditation for James Eskew, school principal whose dismissal has caused a controversy between religious leaders and school patrons.

His resignation was accepted by members of the Kansas City-St. Joseph Catholic Diocese. He attempted to retain his post after parents and school board members protested his dismissal.

Joe Slocum, president of the school's student council, said a walkout by students was first planned, then abandoned. Instead, he said students planned an assembly at which a rosary was to be said for Eskew.

Slocum said students would open each class with a prayer.

Eskew said he was not aware of the planned show of support.

WASHINGTON — Your income tax forms are not held in confidence.

Thousands are regularly looked at by the Justice Department, the Securities and Exchange Commission, congressional committees and other assorted agencies and branches of the federal and state governments. Sometimes for very good reason, sometimes in fishing expeditions for suspected law violations of one type or another and sometimes merely to secure background information as to what kind of a person you are.

In the first half of 1974 alone, the Internal Revenue Service supplied the Department of Justice with 6,114 returns. U.S. attorneys with 9,570, the Securities and Exchange Commissions with 238...and on and on and on.

The Civil Aeronautics Board used tax returns to look into profits on charter flights. They were used to investigate alleged kickbacks by a borrower from the Rural Electrification Administration. They have been used by combined strike forces attacking organized crime. Committees have used them to learn who has information on something being investigated. For a time, the data in income tax forms was used to screen prospective jurors in federal cases.

In many instances the user has provided the IRS with no serious or specific justification for seeking the material. In others the IRS has taken the initiative and suggested that another agency ask it for information on an individual.

Some of these forms are widely circulated without adequate controls to various and sundry departments.

There has been a growing demand for tax returns by U.S. attorneys for investigative purposes, with no assurance that these politically appointed, usually politically ambitious men will not use them illegally to discredit political opponents.

Congressional committees have used tax information for developing investigative leads, providing excellent opportunities for political abuse.

As the official Administrative Conference of the United States — which made the study on which much of this column is based — notes in a detailed report provided Congress, some interesting information has been developed on past White House requests for tax returns:

"Early in the Kennedy administration, Carmine S. Bellino, a special consultant to the President, entered into arrangements with the Internal Revenue Service to inspect tax returns and associated documents.

"Similarly, in the Nixon administration, Clark R. Mollenhoff, deputy counsel to the President, reached an understanding with the commissioner of Internal Revenue concerning the inspection of tax returns.

"So far as is known, neither individual had an actual presidential order to inspect tax returns. They merely exercised the influence of the White House to obtain access to tax information.

"In the Watergate investigation, further evidence was developed that tax return information was improperly transmitted to the White House ..."

"A few weeks after President Ford took office, he issued an executive order designed to control White House access to tax information ..." But, the Administrative Conference notes, executive orders can be changed at will by any president or his successors.

There is evidence the present head of the IRS, over strong opposition, is attempting to eradicate some of the abuses outlined above. How effective he will prove remains to be seen for he is already in hot water for his efforts.

Pressures on busing, abortion

WASHINGTON — Exactly 177 years ago, Thomas Jefferson said: "In questions of power let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."

Hardly a day passes that does not give us reason to marvel at the wisdom of the man.

How could Jefferson have sensed so accurately the inclination of people toward ruthlessness and stupidity when public passions are high, and when the dangers of tyranny by a small majority are great because glands are stronger than the brain?

We Americans have gone through an almost nightmarish period in which Nixon and Agnew, Mitchell and Haldeman, Ehrlichman and the other principals of the Watergate drama gave credence to Jefferson's warning about reliance on "confidence in man."

We would be in a sorry state as a society and a nation had not those forefathers agreed to "bind them down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."

Yet, how strange that so many groups of Americans, spurred by their own special passions, keep trying to loosen those chains of our Constitution.

Wherever you look, it seems, some group propelled by a particular religious zeal, some racial racial animosity, some insular notion of social righteousness, is trying to amend the Constitution. Messing with the Constitution is offered as the cure to every grievance which can't be rammed past judges of conscience.

The Democratic party, generally its own worst enemy, has just fought off an effort to commit that group to a constitutional amendment to outlaw court-ordered school busing for purposes of achieving racial integration.

Who can doubt that but for constitutional safeguards, the courts would have been trampled by the mob and millions of American children would be left twisting in the winds of racial meanness?

And now come the nation's Roman Catholic bishops, committing millions of dollars to a campaign to arouse the country's 48 million Catholics to support a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortion.

I respect the bishops' view that abortion violates the "god-given right to life." I would fight for the right of any Catholic woman to resist an abortion, or any Catholic doctor not to perform one.

But I can never accept the validity of the Catholic church telling a non-Catholic that she may not have an abortion. Nor can I accept the idea that the bishops can inspire a change in the Constitution which imposes upon non-Catholics the Catholic viewpoint as to when human life begins, or whether and under what circumstances a woman may decide that she will not bear a child.

Never could I let anti-Catholic passions push through an amendment declaring that Catholic doctors and hospitals MUST sanction and perform abortions or suffer imprisonment. That would be an outrageous trampling of the human conscience. Neither can I accept a constitutional change which says a miserably poor, woefully uneducated woman who has too many children already must have another child because somebody else's view of life, of godliness, requires that Medicaid money not be spent on that abortion.

The Catholic bishops are impelled by their own sense of righteousness. They just might inspire most of those 48 million Catholics to try to fill the Congress with men who will vote for their "pro-life" amendment.

Still, I suspect that even millions of those Catholics (along with many more non-Catholics) harbor some doubts about the wisdom, the justice, even the godliness, of establishing a constitutional requirement that women have babies they do not want, cannot afford and never will care for.

We should never cease to be thankful that Jefferson and friends produced that Constitution — and that they made it rather invulnerable to hasty change in the passions of a given hour.

Habitual offender a menace on road

More than half of those killed and maimed on America's highways each year — and there were 46,200 in the first category in 1974 — are victims of the HOD, the Habitual Offender Driver, says the National Association of Insurance Agents (NAIA).

Statistically, the number of HODs is few, only about 5 per cent of the driving population, but the wake of destruction they leave is enormous.

The Habitual Offender Driver drives too fast, and the number one cause of all fatal accidents on rural roads in 1974 was speeding.

The HOD drives left of center, and that was the number two cause of 1974 fatal accidents.

Then comes failure to yield right of way, improper overtaking, making improper turns and following too closely — and the arrogant and irresponsible HOD is guilty of all these.

Records from another state show 1,365 convictions for 100 habitual offenders. Still another state shows one man with 32 convictions that have cost him over $5,000. Despite his revoked driver's license, he is still driving.

The NAIA, which represents independent insurance agents in each state, has long campaigned for laws to get the HODs off the road and keep them off, which means putting them in jail if necessary.

In 1968, Virginia became the first state to pass habitual offender legislation. Its law stated that any driver with three major or 12 minor traffic convictions within a 10-year period was to be certified as a Habitual Offender Driver, lose his driver's license for 10 years and go to prison for one to five years if caught driving after losing his license.

The law was credited with a drop in Virginia's highway death rate of some 20 per cent within two years. By contrast, states which lacked anti-HOD laws continued to record increases in traffic fatalities.

Until all the states join the fight to get the Habitual Offender Driver off the road, says M. Jay Wanamaker, president of the NAIA, the nation's auto fatality and injury toll will continue to be tragically and needlessly high. (NEA)

Police files in one state show a HOD who in 11 years was arrested 25 times for traffic violations — 10 arrests for drunk driving, 10 for driving under suspension, and five for speeding, reckless driving and running a red light. He has been arrested an average of 2.3 times a year, has held his license legally for only three months during the 11 years, yet he continues to drive, says the NAIA.

The late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover was worried about public doubts that the Rosenbergs were guilty, doubts that still stubbornly persist. Hoover wanted a dramatic, 11th-hour confession to clear up the doubts.

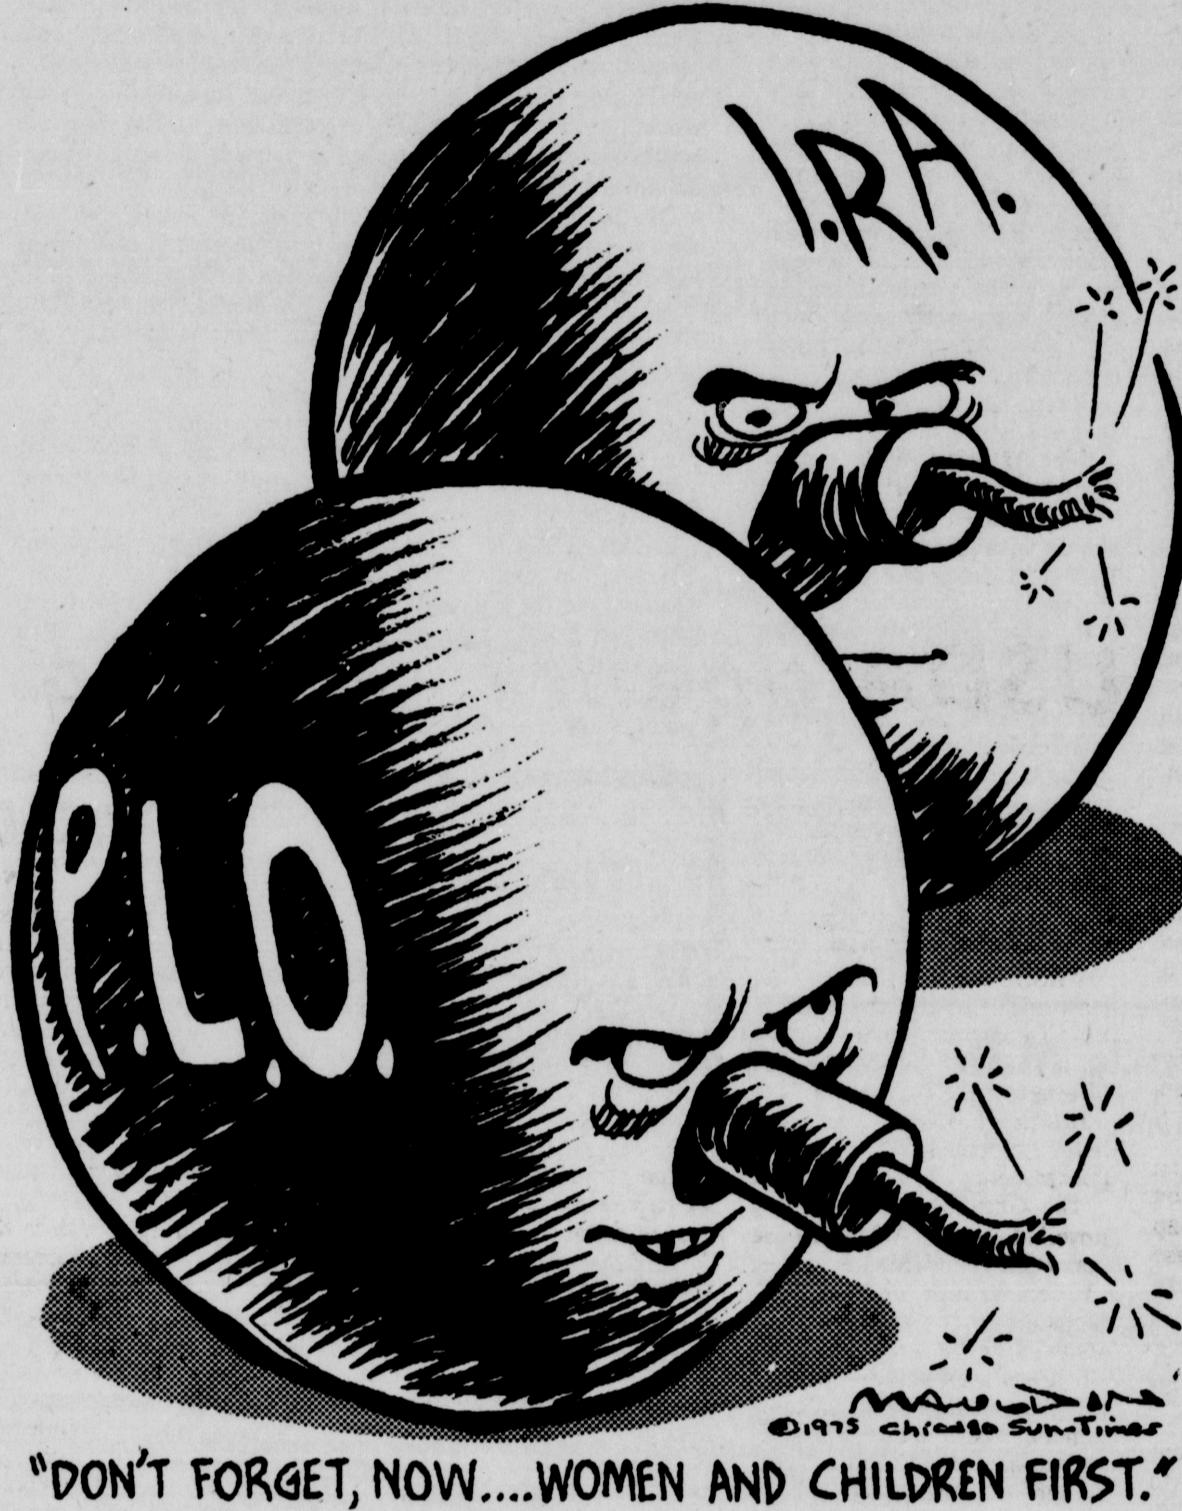

The FBI was convinced, according to our sources, that the Rosenbergs not only were guilty but that the strong-willed Ethel was preventing her weaker husband from confessing.

Indeed, the FBI had learned from Julius Rosenberg's cellmate, a secret FBI informer, that he had admitted guilt. The informer's reputation for credibility, however, was uncertain, so the second-hand confession couldn't be used.

The FBI needed an admission from Julius' own lips. An attempt was made, therefore, to make sure Ethel went to the electric chair first. An agent was standing by, with an open line to Washington, ready to relay the first words of the stunned husband's confession.

But the FBI was unable to change the execution schedule. Julius was executed first, then his wife 10 minutes later. Neither gave a dying confession.

FBI's grisly tactics to get confession

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Newly released documents have revived interest in the case of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were executed for espionage 22 years ago. But still buried is the stark story of how the FBI plotted to wring a confession from Julius by executing his wife first.

It was the FBI's grisly hope that Julius, horrified by the trauma of his wife's death and his own impending electrocution, would blurt out a last-minute confession.

The late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover was worried about public doubts that the Rosenbergs were guilty, doubts that still stubbornly persist. Hoover wanted a dramatic, 11th-hour confession to clear up the doubts.

The FBI was convinced, according to our sources, that the Rosenbergs not only were guilty but that the strong-willed Ethel was preventing her weaker husband from confessing.

DOUBLE AGENT? Daniel Rathbun may be the most valuable double-agent in the history of corporate intrigue. Or he may be an innocent, unwise in the ways of public perceptions.

In any event, his story is a fascinating one.

Rathbun headed up perhaps the most crucial government study in a decade: how much oil and gas is really available in the United States. The study will be a basis for many far-reaching domestic and foreign policy decisions.

The need for such a study was obvious. In the past, the government had only the word of the oil and gas industry. And their word on oil and gas reserves, it was suspected, was heavily influenced by the profit motive. No one was really sure whether there was an energy crisis, or whether the industry was simply holding out for higher prices.

So Congress authorized the study in 1973, and Daniel Rathbun was placed in direct command. Early last month, the study was completed. It gave the industry a clean bill of health, assuring that the figures compiled by the American Petroleum Institute were essentially accurate.

Now here's the rub. Daniel Rathbun has turned up on the American Petroleum Institute payroll. This is a little like a judge going to work for a man he just declared not guilty; it raises doubts about the integrity of the verdict.

Rathbun and his former employers at the Federal Energy Administration hotly deny any impropriety. Eric Zausner, Rathbun's former boss at FEA, claims that Rathbun could not have influenced the study on behalf of industry because it was "locked in cement" over a year ago.

One FEA official confided, nevertheless, that Energy Czar Frank Zarb "hit the roof" when he heard of Rathbun's defection to industry.

Congressional and public interest energy experts, meanwhile, dispute Zausner's view that Rathbun would not have influenced the study for industry.

They point out that the questionnaires sent out by Rathbun to oil and gas producers were heavily influenced by the American Petroleum Institute. Consumer groups were allowed to make suggestions only after they kicked up their heels. But in the end, many of their suggestions were included in the crucial questionnaire.

To make matters even stickier, Rathbun himself has been neither a saint nor a sinner in anyone's eyes while a public servant. Some of his decisions as a deputy assistant administrator have angered consumer groups, and some have angered the industry. Everyone agrees he is a top-flight statistician.

Rathbun himself told our associate Jack Cloherty that he sees no conflict since he will not be involved in data collection at the API.

But Rathbun's move to industry casts a shadow over the government's "independent" oil and gas reserve findings.

Almost every day I have a conversation with someone about hay. Some of the things I hear become a little alarming. It would be a good idea to check your fire insurance.

Record hay prices are expected this winter. According to the USDA Crop Reporting Service, Missouri has the smallest inventory of hay per cow since the mid-'fifties.' We are not alone. Most of our neighboring states have the same problem.

Preventing wastage is one way to stretch your hay supply. Each winter many cows waste as much as they eat — more than a ton per head. A cow that weans a 350-pound heifer calf could trample more hay into the mud than her calf is worth.

Greatest losses occur when cattle are given access to a large number of bales or stacks that have been left on the ground. Wastage is easy to see when large package hay systems are used. However, equal losses occur in fields with small round bales.

Using electric fences to limit access to hay is becoming more popular each year.

This low-labor, low-cost system is probably your best route with small round bales. Many cattlemen with large bales or stacks are hauling them to central locations and are using feeders. Tests show that this method keeps wastage under 10%. This method is nearly equal to results with square bales that have been stored and fed in a barn.

Reducing herd size is an obvious way to stretch hay supplies. Consider selling all slow breeders, poor milkers and overaged cows. Cheap calves and expensive hay make it difficult for highly productive cows to show a profit. There is no way it can be done with the other kind.

Heating with wood

Heating value of properly prepared fuelwood compares favorably with other fuels, and wood is Missouri's most plentiful fuel. Among the better woods for heating are ash, red oak, white oak, birch, hickory and hard maple.

Ratings for firewood, advice on seasoning and burning wood, and some tips on buying it are in a new Guide, No. 5450, "Wood Fuel for Heating," now available at Extension Center.

Wood must be sold by the cord or fractions of a cord, the guide says. A cord is 128 cubic feet — generally measuring 4 feet wide, 4 feet high, and 8 feet long.

The wheat market since the 1975 harvest has been a disappointing and costly experience to growers, and the

There were no known injuries.

Congressman calls for U.S. pressure

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — U.S. Congressman Andrew Young, calling foreign involvement in the Angolan civil war a "very cynical form of racism," called for American pressure on the Soviet Union and South Africa to end their participation.

At a news conference Sunday, the Georgia Democrat said the U.S. should not share food and technology with the Russians "if they are going to cynically exploit the frustrations and tensions of oppressed people around the world."

The Soviet Union is supporting one of three factions fighting for control of the former Portuguese colony in Africa. South Africa is reportedly assisting another faction.

The long-range success of a beef herd depends more on the genetic procedures and breeding practices followed by cattlemen than on the breed they select.

USDA agency plans to set up speakers bureau

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least one agency of the Agriculture Department plans to set up a speakers bureau as part of a new drive by the Ford administration to keep consumers better informed of goings on in government.

The consumer program was unveiled by the White House last week. The USDA is among 17 departments and agencies included in the plan, seen by some critics as a move to justify Ford's expected veto of a bill that would set up an independent consumer agency.

Overall, the USDA's "consumer representation plan" calls for each department agency to be responsible for "using appropriate procedures for informing consumers about ongoing activities as well as emerging issues."

Besides giving "full consideration" to consumer views in making decisions, each agency will be held accountable for telling the public "the rationale behind those decisions" by using whatever means available to spread the word.

The speakers will be key APHIS officials who will be selected for their knowledge and speaking ability as well as their willingness to keep current on APHIS programs and speak on very short notice," the agency's plan said.

Among those, APHIS said, is a plan to "establish a formal mechanism to provide speakers to interested groups at relatively short notice" on a variety of subjects. The agency's functions include meat and poultry inspection, animal and plant quarantines, and disease and pest control programs.

"The speakers will be key APHIS officials who will be selected for their knowledge and speaking ability as well as their willingness to keep current on APHIS programs and speak on very short notice," the agency's plan said.

Also, the agency said, "dialogue with consumer reporters" will be increased. "While some informal contacts have been maintained, the communications with this important channel to the consuming public will be expanded and made more permanent," officials said.

But there are obstacles to all this, the agency's proposal said. It will cost more money, for one thing, and current budget restraints are holding down prospects for any significant expansion.

At present, budgets are strained just to keep up with current programs," the report said. "We suggest that department officials remain sensitive to the growing need for consumer representation in agency programs and give favorable attention to budget requests which seek to implement plans to meet the need."

Rain, snow hamper rescue of 22 hunters

By The Associated Press

Snow, freezing rain and wind made traveling risky today in the Northwest and impeded the rescue of a group of hunters stranded in Washington's Asotin County. The hunters, 22 men and women, had to direct rescuers Sunday night with a citizen's band radio.

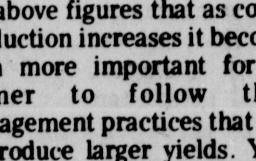

A radio operator in Lewiston, Idaho, in contact with the hunters and the rescue party, said the rescuers were using winches tied to trees to inch their vehicles through heavy snow and dense timber.

The operator said one of the hunters stranded since Sunday morning has a serious heart condition. Sheriff Herbert Reeves said he would summon an Air Force helicopter rescue unit if the man's condition worsened.

Break-even price per bushel for wheat, assuming a 30 bushel per acre yield, is $3.80. If the yield of wheat is increased to 40 bushel per acre, the break-even price per bushel declines to $2.85.

It should be apparent from the above figures that as cost or production increases it becomes even more important for the farmer to follow those management practices that help to produce larger yields. Yield increases spread ownership costs over more bushels and thus reduce cost on a per bushel basis.

Lower pork, sugar prices offset by butter, coffee

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Prices gained slightly on the consumer at grocery stores in November, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows. The shopper found lower prices for such items as pork chops and sugar, but they were more than offset by higher ones for eggs, butter and coffee.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

During November, the marketbasket total at the checklist store was up in seven cities, with an average hike of 3.7 per cent, and down in six cities, with an average drop of 2.6 per cent. Overall, the bill near the start of December was eight-tenths of 1 per cent more than a month earlier.

During October, the marketbasket bill increased in six cities and dipped in seven, and the change in prices overall for the month was an increase of three-tenths of 1 per cent.

The changes seemed to generally follow those at farm and wholesale levels. The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported last Friday that from Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, farmers were paid less for hogs and more for milk and eggs.

On the AP marketbasket, eggs increased in price at the 12 stores at which the check-list's medium Grade A size was available. The average increase for the 12 stores was 16 per cent.

Milk prices increased in 5 of the 13 stores, fell at two and remained at the same level in six.

Another item with price hikes was coffee, going up at seven stores, down at one and remaining the same at four. The type of coffee on the checklist was not available at the other store.

The change in coffee prices continued to reflect a frost in Brazil that heavily damaged that country's coffee crop. It has been slow to filter through to retailers because supermarkets often use coffee as a "loss-leader" to draw customers.

The price of sugar, which hit record levels and caused a consumer protest last year, continued to drift downward. It declined in six of the 12 stores where the variety to be checked was available and was up in only one. It was the same price in five other of the stores.

The price of pork chops was down in six checklist groceries, up in three and remained the same in four. However, the Agriculture Department warned that pork supplies would be "light" in December and said prices on both pork and beef would rise slightly in the first half of 1976.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, all-beef frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

BEEF CATTLE

The long-range success of a beef herd depends more on the genetic procedures and breeding practices followed by cattlemen than on the breed they select.

1. Beef performance testing programs started in the 1950's by about 35 State Extension Services. These programs, often in cooperation with State breed organizations, are continuing.

2. Production records of beef cattle accumulated by Performance Registry International, an organization founded in 1955.

3. Performance and carcass evaluation programs conducted by most breed associations to aid their members in selecting superior cattle.

4. Numerous research programs conducted at State and Federal Experiment Stations.

Gant said he also opposed gun-control legislation but did not support Manford's bill.

Dawson pressured

Colts show no pity on K.C. Chiefs

BALTIMORE (AP) — Glenn Doughty preferred to say it in rhyme. Bert Jones stayed with more conventional grammar.

But after Baltimore's 28-14 victory over Kansas City Sunday, the message was clear either way: The Colts can't afford to lose another game if they're to reach the National Football League playoffs.

"On the Chiefs, we had no pity," poetized Doughty. "Next stop for victory—New York City."

Jones, across the locker room from his cigar-smoking teammate, agreed that the coming week's contest against the lowly Giants in Shea Stadium is just as important to Baltimore's playoff chances as the one the following Sunday against the division-leading Miami Dolphins.

"If we don't win next week, it's no good the week after," said the big quarterback, who completed 12 of 13 passes including 11 in a row against the Chiefs.

The Colts used a series of big plays on both offense and defense to win their sixth consecutive game and stay a half-game behind Miami, pending the outcome of the Dolphins' game tonight against New England.

Free safety Jackie Wallace picked off a Len Dawson pass and returned it 42 yards for a touchdown to open the scoring early in the second period. Less than five minutes later, the Colts had a 14-0 lead on a one-yard run by Bill Olds. The score was set up by a 58-yard pass from Jones to Doughty.

The big-play system continued in the third period when Lydell Mitchell turned left end and, following blocks by wide receiver Roger Carr and tight end Raymond Chester, sprinted 70 yards for a score.

Baltimore built a 28-0 lead on a 17-yard pass from Jones to Chester before the Chiefs tallied on a pair of Dawson passes—a three-yarder to Doug Dressler and a 25-yarder to Larry Brunson.

"Those big plays take the wind out of your sails," lamented Kansas City Coach Paul Wiggin. "We knew the Colts could do it. They take the initiative and we fell into their hands. This is their philosophy. They're a make-things-happen team."

Coach Ted Marchibroda of Baltimore, however, said the team's explosiveness is more a result of adaptation than theorization.

"You come in with a system, but you mold that system to the personnel at hand," Marchibroda said. "In Bert Jones, we know we have a big-play quarterback. And Lydell has been making the big play for us all season long."

The loss eliminated the Chiefs from playoff contention and left them with a 5-6 mark. The Colts are now 7-4 and guaranteed their first non-losing season since 1971.

Dawson, subbing for injured

Mike Livingston, completed 25 of 37 passes for 307 yards despite tremendous pressure from the Colt front four, which sacked him seven times.

Jones had 145 yards on his 12 completions before leaving the game at the start of the final quarter. Mary Donnes, Jones replacement, completed all four of his passes for 66 yards.

Mitchell carried 26 times for 178 yards and caught four passes for another 41.

Earl Morrall tries hand against Pats

MIAMI (AP) — Earl Morrall, a 1954 Michigan State teammate of New England Coach Chuck Fairbanks, will lead the Miami Dolphins against Fairbanks' Patriots tonight in a crucial American Football Conference game.

The Dolphins, 7-3 after two consecutive losses, must win to stay in front of Buffalo and Baltimore, both 7-4 in the East Division.

And Morrall, the 41-year-old quarterback, has become the Dolphins' key man for the four-game stretch drive and any playoff games. Bob Griese won't be able to return from a toe injury for at least five more weeks.

Fairbanks said he asked Morrall last summer how much longer he was going to play and the 20-year pro replied, "As long as Bob Griese stays healthy."

Old sentiments will die when the nationally televised game kicks off at 9 p.m. EST. When Fairbanks was asked if he would tell his 3-7 club not to blitz Morrall, he replied, "Sure, I'll be happy to make that arrangement if he agrees not to throw any touchdown passes."

Morrall, who replaced the injured Griese and led the Dolphins to 10 straight victories in 1972, declared himself ready again.

"Three years later, I feel we still have the team and I can do it," said Morrall. "When you feel somebody coming, you've got to be able to move. I can still get outside and buy some time."

This is the third time Don Shula has gone to Morrall to save a season. Shula obtained Morrall for Baltimore in 1968 and after Johnny Unitas was hurt, Morrall led the Colts to the Super Bowl.

For the Dolphins, Shula acquired Morrall for the $100 waiver price in 1972 and Morrall threw for 1,360 passing yards and 11 touchdowns. He was named the National Football League's most valuable player after leading the Dolphins to the Super Bowl.

Racing great, five others dead

Two questions surround Hill crash

LONDON (AP) — Investigators probing the air crash which killed former world motor racing champion Graham Hill and five of his team were trying to find answers today to two questions as they examined the burnt-out wreckage of the light airplane he had been piloting.

The first question was why Hill, an experienced pilot, chose in heavy fog to continue to head for an airport with only minimal navigational aids instead of diverting to another nearby airport with full radar landing facilities.

The other question was whether ice forming on the wings of his red and white, twin-engined, six-seat Piper Aztec plane weighed it down and was responsible for sending it crashing into trees near a golf course 10 miles north of London Saturday night.

The plane crashed on the course three miles from Elstree Airport after leaving Mar-selles, France, and burst into flames. Hill and his team had been testing a new car on a French Riviera racing circuit.

Airport authorities at Mar-selles listed the other persons aboard the plane as engineer Ray Brimble, who designed Hill's latest racing car, and mechanics Andy Smallman, Terry Richards and Tony Hancock. Brimble, Smallman and Richards were all British, Hancock was Australian.

Britain's official aeronautical information service said Elstree Airport has the minimal of navigational aids.

The instrument landing system, no radar and no directional beacons. But it was Hill's home airport. His plush home set in 30 acres of countryside was only a few minutes drive away from it and he knew the landing procedure there well.

Twenty miles away Luton Airport has full radar landing facilities.

Hill's widow Bette, mourning his death with their three children, said, "Graham has always managed to get into Elstree before. I didn't realize it was as bad as it must have been."

She said Hill had flown for about 10 years, never took chances and was "as safe as houses in the air."

Knicks tumble, 110-98

Kings' rookies play key roles in victory

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Glenn Hansen is only a rookie.

He doesn't play regularly and was on the floor only 11 minutes for the Kansas City Kings Sunday night, mostly in the fourth quarter.

That was long enough for Hansen to convince eight-year pro Walt Frazier, leading scorer for the New York Knicks, he may be around for a long time.

Hansen shut Frazier off with only four fourth-quarter points, and the Kings broke the game open for a 110-98 National Basketball Association victory over the Knicks.

"He's tough," said Frazier, who finished with 36 points, of the youngster from Louisiana State. "He came off the bench charged up. I thought I could intimidate him. I put the moves on him, and he didn't fall for it."

While Hansen was hounding Frazier, rookie Bill Robinzon and center Sam Lacey found the basket often and the Kings pulled into a 13-point lead during a five-minute span after Frazier had tied the game for the last time at 82-82.

Robinzon was the ringleader during the Kings' uprising, making seven of Kansas City's first nine points after the deadlock.

"Robinzon did a real good job offensively and defensively," Kings Coach Phil Johnson said. "He ran the court well. However, there was no one player the star of this game. Scott Wedman got us off and running in the third quarter with three straight baskets."

Johnson was disturbed because the Kings ran up a 16-point advantage twice in the first quarter and lost the lead.

Romp to tourney titleSFCC eyes win No. 6 Tuesday

With their second straight State Fair Classic Tournament championship trophy already on the shelf, the Roadrunners won't get much of a rest before their next action, which is scheduled Tuesday night in the Agriculture Building on the Fairgrounds.

SFCC, which eased through Friday and Saturday night games to the championship of their own four-team tourney, meets the Bears' junior varsity from Southwest Missouri State University at 7:30 p.m.

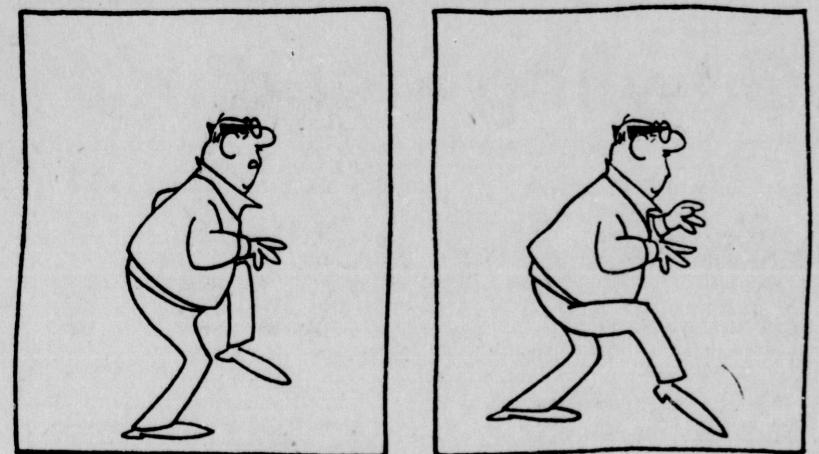

The Roadrunners pushed their record to 5-1 on the strength of Saturday night's 92-76 victory over Kansas City (Kan.) Community College in the championship game of the tournament. State Fair broke away early, weathered some shakey moments midway through the first half before cruising to the win.

"I don't feel like we played as well tonight as we did overall last night," said Coach Bill Barton after the Saturday night victory.

Jim: "One of our readers has asked us to write about some of the best and worst hands of our careers. It looks like a good idea."

Oswald: "I have one standout bad hand. It was the final match of the 1938 Vanderbilt Cup. Ted Lightner, South, and Ely Culbertson had bid up to six hearts. This was back before any four notrump convention had been thought of and I was on lead against six hearts."

Jim: "You don't mean to say that you led a low spade and that your partner played the ten after dummy played low!"

Oswald: "Actually, the nine was played from dummy. Perhaps he should have played the king on the theory that I was then the sort of young genius (idiot) who might underlead an ace against a slam, but no one can really blame him."

Jim: "Culbertson really should have held the king of spades for his six-heart bid. Give him the king and East the queen and you would have been a genius."

Oswald: "It still hurts. The Culbertson team won the tournament. Our team came in an unhappy second."

Oswald: "I still hurts. The Culbertson team won the tournament. Our team came in an unhappy second."

They decided to play the hand out that way and they were correct in doing so. This doesn't happen often, but it does happen.

CARNIVAL

by Dick Turner

"The beauty of a trash compactor, Ma'am, is that it gives you an extra closet!"

Warmed by victory

An unidentified, shirtless Green Bay Packer football fan is heartened by the news on the scoreboard in Green Bay, where the Packers trounced the Chicago Bears 28-7 for their third victory of the season. The game was played in subfreezing, snowy weather Sunday.

Consumers are baffled by economic rhetoric

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If you don't already have enough economic matters to dwell upon, you might consider these:

—If prices are rising, asks the ordinary consumer, who is legion, how can the country rebound strongly from recession?

If you are an habitual reader of scores of economic reports from banks and businesses and business schools and other places on high, you cannot but observe that the professionals really don't come to grips with this question.

For the consumer, it isn't a matter of coming to grips with it; contrarily, he and she are gripped by it. There is no ignoring higher prices or what they do: they turn off spending, whenever it can be turned off.

There is no theory or need for theory to explain what is happening in the pocketbook. It is there that reality exists, and it cannot be ignored. There is no room or time for dreaming, because the dreamer starves.

At the professional level, where almost everyone is caught up in theories and computer models and dogma, this elemental consideration sometimes seems not to fit. There is an awareness perhaps, but not an appreciation.

On the battle front, it is the only consideration.

The battle front, of course, is the market place where the consumer does his spending. Two-thirds of this economy of ours is made up of consumer spending. It is almost impossible.

The second consideration is, for the mass of people, a far more enjoyable prospect. The age of workers' capitalism has already begun, says a man who should know, he being the portfolio adviser on millions of dollars of investments.

"The time is fast approaching when the workers will own the bulk of America's capital," says John Wright, in an address written for a meeting of the International Longshoremen's Association in Bal Harbour, Fla., Monday.

Wright, who runs an investment service in Bridgeport, Conn. that numbers scores of banks among its customers, maintains that the new capitalism is resulting from legislation permitting tax-free accumulation of capital for retirement.

The workers will progressively become the principal owners of American business sible, short of war, for the economy to grow if the consumer isn't a strong participant.

The professionals don't deny this; they proclaim it. But then they go on to expect the consumer to win the war, so to speak, while the enemy is advancing. The enemy is inflation, and the consumer treats it.

The figures for October show that enemy inflation rose at an 8.4 per cent annual rate, which puts us right back to the identical level that prevailed in the first quarter of the year. No improvement.

Retail sales, meanwhile, are admittedly "less than had been anticipated," as the too-familiar phrase reads. Even the Commerce Department concedes that.

The consumer, however, is a bit baffled by the anticipations of the "experts." He asks: "What did you expect?" To him it is axiomatic: When you raise prices you don't want me to buy."

Why, then, are prices rising? If consumer demand is off, shouldn't prices fall in order to encourage buying? That's the theory — and it's also the problem the experts should be dealing with. Theory is their business, just as the reality of the market place is where the consumer is expert.

The second consideration is, for the mass of people, a far more enjoyable prospect. The age of workers' capitalism has already begun, says a man who should know, he being the portfolio adviser on millions of dollars of investments.

"The time is fast approaching when the workers will own the bulk of America's capital," says John Wright, in an address written for a meeting of the International Longshoremen's Association in Bal Harbour, Fla., Monday.

Wright, who runs an investment service in Bridgeport, Conn. that numbers scores of banks among its customers, maintains that the new capitalism is resulting from legislation permitting tax-free accumulation of capital for retirement.

The workers will progressively become the principal owners of American business through the pension and profit-sharing plans of which they are beneficiaries," he said, concluding.

This is, moreover, the most equitable, most efficient kind of American capitalism because the workers, including the hard-working managements of American corporations, are the people who ought to own America and stand to benefit from its successful growth.

Popularity down for Japan's Miki

TOKYO (AP) — A newspaper survey has put Prime Minister Takeo Miki's popularity rating at 28 per cent, down from 45 per cent when he formed his first cabinet a year ago.

The newspaper, Asahi Shimbun, said Sunday that in the past, Japanese prime ministers "reach the end of their reign" when the survey shows popularity down near 20 per cent.

Miki came to power as a compromise choice when the party became hopelessly deadlocked over a successor to former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Child suffers hypoglycemia

Dear Dr. Lamb — My two and a half year old son has hypoglycemia. Last New Years day he was acting very strange all morning. By strange I mean very tipsy, throwing up and terribly crabby. I laid him down for a nap, and an hour later I heard a loud scream. I ran to the bedroom. His bed was covered with vomit, and he was in a coma. We rushed him to the hospital, and over an hour later it was established that he had a low blood sugar. As soon as they injected sugar he came out of the coma within minutes.

He remained in the hospital for a week, but they never came to a conclusion as to what caused the episode. About two weeks ago he was showing the same symptoms, and I gave him a glass of juice with a lot of sugar in it, and in about 10 minutes he was fine again.

Our son is super-active and seems to always need something to eat or drink. I try not to give him sweets to snack on. Is this the right thing to do? Can you help me as to what is causing this? Will he have it the rest of his life? I have read about hypoglycemia in your columns, but it doesn't seem to fit my boy.

Dear Reader — Your description sounds like he has primary hypoglycemia. The usual type of disorder seen in most adults is secondary and is often related to a previous stomach operation or certain poor dietary habits. These people usually get hypoglycemia after eating, whereas the primary attacks can occur before eating.

I can't tell you exactly what your son has, but I do know that he will need some very specialized tests and for that reason you should arrange to have him seen by the endocrinologist section of the nearest university medical center. Don't delay as repeated attacks in children sometime lead to brain damage. He can probably be treated.

The most likely problem is some defect in complex enzymes in his metabolic system. Of course, he could also have some extra insulin-producing tissue. If it is the latter that could be removed. If it is an enzyme disorder his proper treatment will depend on what the defect actually is.

Remember hypoglycemia is just a symptom, not a diagnosis. You'll need to know the cause of the symptom to provide proper treatment.

In the secondary more common type of hypoglycemia, the patient has anxiety, sweating, tremor and a host of symptoms related to the release of adrenaline.

In primary hypoglycemia the effects of a low blood glucose level in the brain dominate the symptoms. The patient will show signs of altered behavior, as your son did, of mental confusion, coma and even convulsions.

In primary hypoglycemia physical activity may use up all the available glucose and induce an attack. Your active son could very well do this. When he is active be sure he has enough to eat, including available sugar (NEA).
